

Stephane Jacobzone

Stephane Jacobzone is an OECD official, with responsibility for the OECD High Level Risk Forum. He has worked in several OECD areas, including regulatory and risk management, public governance, as well as health and social issues. He contributed to the establishment of the High Level Risk Forum (HLRF), as a follow up to the activities on risk launched in the context of OECD International Futures Programme. In that capacity, he oversaw the preparation of the G20 methodological framework on risk assessment and financing, as well as various activities on strategic crisis management, risk and crisis communication. Mr Jacobzone recently coordinated a report on achieving public sector agility at times of fiscal consolidation. He is also coordinating the OECD Public Governance Committee. He also led multidisciplinary regulatory reform reviews in Australia, Mexico, Brazil, France, Italy, Korea, Mexico, Norway, Sweden, and Switzerland. In prior assignments, Mr. Jacobzone supported the launch of the OECD health project, including assessing the economic implications of ageing and the diffusion of new health technologies for public finances and health systems as well as the regulation of pharmaceuticals. An alumni of the Ecole Polytechnique and ENSAE, France, and research fellow at CREST-INSEE, Mr Jacobzone also taught at the French Institut d'Etudes Politiques, Ecole Nationale d'Administration and ENSAE, and participated in the US National Bureau of Economic Research (NBER).
